AHCU's Rick Gonnerman, CIO Earns Certified Credit Union Executive Designation

Anoka Hennepin Credit Union is thrilled to announce Rick Gonnerman, CIO, has earned the high honor of CCUE designation. The designation is part of a three-year Credit Union Management School program provided by America's Credit Unions. The program is the gold standard designation for credit union professionals dedicated to leadership and the credit union movement.

The Certified Credit Union Executive (CCUE) designation, instituted in 1975, is the hallmark of professional credit union achievement. Designed for credit union staff looking to gain the knowledge and experience needed to advance their careers, this program teaches advanced credit union management and operations techniques.

Gonnerman has been with AHCU since January 1999. Rick and his team play an intracule part in the direction of the credit union's information systems, maintaining cybersecurity and administration of the credit union's technological infrastructure. Through Rick's leadership, member data and privacy are protected at the highest degree.

AHCU President/CEO says "Rick has been instrumental in the development and growth of AHCU. I am proud of the work he has done to complete his CCUE with the added responsibilities of a merger and the day-to-day processes involved in the running of the credit unions IT initiatives. Rick has a drive to be better and to make our members lives better! I congratulate him on his continued growth as a credit union executive!"
